A LITTLE GAIN.

It is too early for that portion of the community which is interested in the enforcement of the laws for punishing those who are guilty of lewdness and sexual immorality to jubilate. It is true, the Chief Justice has held the law under which Deputy Marshal Vandercook is being prosecuted by the county authorities to be good, and decided that the proceedings so far in the case have been regular and proper. This is something in the way of a triumph for morality and good order; it is more than many expected to gain, but not more than all hoped for who think the laws should be obeyed and respected alike by all classes of citizens. But much as has been gained by His Honor's dismissal of the writ and the remanding of the prisoner back to the justice's court for trial on the charge of lewd and lascivious conduct the gain is chiefly in the direction of encouragement; the decision will by no means end the discussion and leave fair sailing for the county authorities in their efforts to suppress prostitution and punish those guilty of immorality. The men who are said to be "on the list" are not going to submit quietly and without protest to the enforcement of the law against them; they condemn, with loud voices, opposition by others to the application of the law, but there will not be a stone left unturned by them in their endeavors to escape the punishment they so richly deserve. We will see that before any of them submit to the sentence imposed by the Justice's Court, the District and Supreme Courts will be appealed to to relieve the lecher from the legal consequences of their offense, and it will be almost a miracle if punishment shall follow conviction in any of these cases.

Meantime, it will be the duty of the County officials to go ahead with the prosecutions, upon the theory that no guilty man should escape. If the rumors that have been floating about the past few weeks are in small degree true, it is high time that some vigorous steps were taken towards purifying the city's morals. The local authorities will be negligent if they have knowledge of violations of the statutes if they do not proceed against the guilty parties, be the latter high or low in the social scale.

The New York World's alleged Omaha dispatch of which a synopsis was given in Friday's HERALD, is even more infamously untruthful in its entirety than in the abbreviated report that we published. For instance, it says, pretending to describe the scene at the City Hall, after THE HERALD's "extra editions"—which were never issued—"calling upon the church to avenge the murder of a saint"—which call was never made—and "leaving the faithful of the church" until they assembled and "organized for the murder of Collin"—that "a rope was procured and the leader of the mob, standing upon an elevation, made a bloody speech ending with the words, 'We will make mincemeat of him if we can get him. On to the jail! Let the murder of at least one saint be avenged!'" There is more of this sort of rot with which the World has been fooled and fooled its readers.

OVERSHOT THE MARK.

Unless we are sadly mistaken the latest lie told by the agent of the Associated Press, whose office and that of the Tribune in this city are identical, will act as a boomerang upon the "high and holy cause" it was intended to subserve. A more reckless, rotten mass of falsehoods than were sent from the Tribune office and printed in the leading papers of the country in relation to the alleged Mormon uprising, it has never been our lot to behold. But like all such things when fearfully overdone, the scheme has failed of its purpose. The President's message, which it hoped to influence, was a disappointment to the liars after all, that part in relation to the Mormons manifesting no symptom of having been inspired outside of Washington, despite the desperate efforts to affect it in some way by the rule or ruin ring who manipulate the wires that furnish "news" from this much maligned city.

The refutation of the vile calumnies last sent forth to dupe and deceive a gullible public, ere this is in the hands of the President of the United States. With the memory of how he was misled by them once or twice before still ranking in his mind, it remains to be seen what the Chief Executive will do with the unprincipled scamps who are retained by him in offices from which they should long ago have been ousted, now that it has begun to dawn upon him that it is a nest of vipers he is nourishing and that they are bent on stinging him and his administration every chance they get. This latest lie, we hope and believe will give them their quietus.

Some, but we do not believe all, of the Gentiles of Utah may be proud of the course pursued by their self-styled organ in solving the Mormon problem, but with those who are fairest minded and even ordinarily decent, it can only be regarded with feelings of unutterable disgust. We believe President Cleveland will share in the sentiment of the latter class and act accordingly. Turn the rascals out from places they daily disgrace; they are unfit for decent society even, let alone to hold offices of public trust and emolument. If the government wishes to convince the Mormons that their religion is a humbug and ought to be abolished as such, let them assail it with decent weapons, and in a fair and open manner. Nothing is better calculated to stimulate these alleged misguided people in their so-called erroneous faith than the idea that fifty-five millions of people with the law and the military on their side, cannot afford to meet 150,000 "degraded Mormon fanatics" with any more honorable implements of warfare than falsehood, vituperation and abuse.

THE NEW YORK World says in an editorial paragraph: "The Salt Lake Mormons seem to be inclined to precipitate affairs. It wouldn't be a bad idea to teach them about this time that while this is a free country there is a point at which the line is occasionally drawn." Evidently the World has not drawn the line at truthful information, upon which to base its comment. If its alleged Omaha special telegram reproduced in THE HERALD on Friday were not manufactured in the World editorial rooms, its correspondent is entitled to wear the laurels that have hitherto been worn by Joe Mulholland, Tom Ochiltree and Eli Perkins. He is at least three liars rolled into one.

NO OBJECTION TO SOLDIERS.

The effort is made all the time to have it appear that the people of Utah are opposed to the presence of soldiers; that the objection to the coming here of troops is based upon fear of the military arm of the government. There was never a greater error. No one objects to the coming in of soldiers; on the contrary, we wish the entire United States army was stationed here. Too many troops cannot be brought to Utah. The more that come the better pleased will be the people of the Territory, and the sooner they arrive the heartier will be their welcome. We want soldiers, have wanted them and will continue to want them while they have to eat and drink, and government pays them for wearing the blue. It is not the army to which there is objection, but to the suggestion that troops are necessary for the preservation of peace, the protection of any class of the people and the maintenance of order. There is objection to troops being stationed here as a threat, when there is no occasion for a menace. If the people had been disorderly, if they had been rebellious or shown a disposition to override law and defy the regularly constituted authority, if life and property were unsafe and the civil power was unable to assert itself and maintain its supremacy, the case would be different; but as all is peace and quiet, as the civil authority has not failed and is not likely to fail, as nobody entertains the slightest fear that disorder will come and anarchy assert itself, the coming of troops to "preserve order" is an insult, and consequently offensive. People dislike to be slandered; they do not relish being labeled and treated as if they were rebellious and lawless—sort of bandits who had to be held in restraint by bayonets.

Send on the soldiers as fast as possible; bring in regiment after regiment, and keep them all here; but do not say they are here to subject anybody, or to interfere in any manner with the administration of the law by the constitutional authorities. It will be time enough to threaten and coerce when the civil government fails to perform its functions.

THE TESTIMONY given in the Lewis trial before the Justice of the Peace, on Friday, demonstrated more than the guilt of the accused—it demonstrated that if there are to be any more of these trials, the public should be excluded from the investigations. No man with any degree of self-respect left in him will demand a public trial where such nastiness as that brought out in the case referred to is to be spread before the community. If the doors cannot be closed against the police court rabble, the newspapers can at least do their share by refusing to soil and smear their columns with the vile filth. THE HERALD hopes and believes it has no readers who would delight in perusing realistic reports of the testimony as recited from the witness stand, hence none of the nastiness shall appear in this journal.
